October 6-8, 2017
IPFW’s Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders is sponsoring its ninth annual augmentative/alternative communication (AAC) theatre day camp for individuals ages 6–23, who use AAC for communicating.

October 6-8, 2017

The IPFW AAC Poss-Abilities Theatre Camp will feature a variety of activities for the camper and parent(s)/guardian(s)/caregiver(s). On the final day, camp participants will take part in the public performance of a short play followed by light refreshments.

Maximum enrollment for the camp is limited to 10 participants.

Written notification of acceptance into the camp will be made by the end of August.

WHAT IS THE COST OF THE CAMP?

This program will be FREE for the participants again this year. (Overnight accommodations are not included; however, IPFW is in close proximity to such facilities.) The campers will receive a T-shirt, lunch on Saturday, and an award for participating.

The parent(s)/guardian(s)/caregiver(s) will be required to purchase a T-shirt.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE FOR THE CAMP?

Individuals who:

- Are 6–23 years old, and who use an augmentative and/or alternative communication device OR who have a low-tech device with the potential to use a simple AAC device
- Can successfully separate from their parent(s)/guardian(s)/caregiver(s) and work with unfamiliar adults
- Have stable health and the physical stamina to tolerate camp activities and variations in their routine without adversely affecting health and behaviors
- Have one parent/guardian/caregiver who will be present and take part in the activities of the weekend

WHAT ACTIVITIES WILL BE INCLUDED IN THE CAMP?

Campers will prepare and perform in a play and participate in games and social activities. Parent(s)/guardian(s)/caregiver(s) will be involved with building sets and completing costumes.
